Tempting, the cries a wire feeds severing ties with life and death.
Bargaining chips escape disgrace taunting the final notes of breath.

Flesh bleeds forbidden words of truth, announcing what the soul invites.
Gouge out the vision eyes permit, conjuring hate - a heart incites.

Walk the path of righteousness, holding hands with deaths' design.
Immoral is the victors' stance, headless the one that we enshrine.

Mate with the sun that births the moon and dances with the face of time.
Awakening your crimson tears, Heaven awaits within life's crime.

From your garden, I choose thorny roses - withered willows, deserted soils welcome footprints.
I follow the path to a barren land, seeds sprinkle from tears of growth, nurturing deceptive tulips - purple, blue - my bruises stem from a quiet drought, your levee questions what freedom answers.
Suffering gives birth, awakening a sun that overshadows your foundation - burning.
I greet death with a rose from your garden.

I sing songs of sobriety,
dancing near memory's well.
I refuse to drown,
so I tease stained glass walls with a tongue that hinders forgiveness.
My mind is destined for greatness still my tongue hinders forgiveness from the stained glass wall I tease.
Dancing near memory's well, singing songs of sobriety -
I refuse to drown.

I ramble through souls
once driven - perpetrators living within the dawn, hiding behind lights - softly caressing hands while blinding words escape - fallen letters buried below - collected dust, I wash away. My feet trod foundations laid to rest where sour eyes, bitter tongues awaken tears once genuine.
Mouths penetrate fears, wrestle unknown passions.
Avenging the night, dreams become displaced.
